HOW SOON WE ARE FORGOTTEN!—A good deal has been said and written in this country about the widow Lincoln peddling her old clothes, many of which were given to her while she was the wife of "the late lamented," and mistress at the White House. The public indignation was greatly stirred at this freak of one who had figured so largely at the Republican Court, (a part of which she was,) in the days when parvenues, and shoddy contractors bought their way to favor. But a worse case is about to transpire in "Merrie England," where the personal effects of the late Charles Dickens, many of them trifling souvenirs of friendship from his former admirers, are to be disposed of at public auction! Dickens left his family rich and secured for himself a tomb in Westminster Abbey, provided at Government expense; and yet the greed of his family is such that it overcomes all the finer sensibilities of human nature and does not scruple to exchange, for money, all the precious mementoes of the great man, which, one might suppose, his children would value above every thing else. The New York Post, referring to this subject, well remarks:—

"It seems very strange that the family of an eminent man who, dying, left a large fortune to his heirs, should consent to the dispersion at public sale of the articles especially associated with his memory. Yet this is the case in the family of Chas. Dickens. Scarcely is the body of the great novelist cold in the vault in Westminster Abbey, when a sale of his pictures and other works of art is announced to take place at the rooms of a leading London auctioneer. Many of the articles to be sold are presents to the deceased, or portraits of himself, or illustrations of his works, painted by the best artists. For instance, there is the celebrated portrait by Maclise, representing Mr. Dickens as he appeared in the flush of early manhood in the year 1839. In the list of miscellaneous paintings there are works by Webster, Frith, Clarkson, Stanfield, Wilkie, and other artists of celebrity. Among the articles of vertu are bronzes, porcelains, and other elegant trifles. All of these are to be sold on Saturday of this week, and will, undoubtedly, bring high prices; but it is difficult to understand how any sum of money can induce the Dickens family to part with treasures that to them should, one would think, be of inestimable value.

"It will be remembered that Mr. Thackeray's books, pictures and other personal effects, were sold off after his death in the same hasty manner.

HOW THEY DO IN PARIS.—A French writer describing a market scene and the seizure of certain articles of food by the police, relates a conversation which he held with one of the conservators of the public health and stomach. That functionary informed him that the police do not object to chickery, chestnuts, acorns, potato, beet root, carrot, turnip, maize, and such innocent articles in the ground coffee. But the functionaries are down on breakfast. He learned further that there are thirty-eight ways of adulterating salad oil, and only one-tenth of the oil sold is free from adulteration. Horse flesh is now legitimate; cats' flesh and cats' flesh, though not endorsed and proclaimed, enter into the composition of "dainty little courses" in the cheap restaurants. Milk is adulterated not only with chalk and whitening but sometimes worse abominations. If we are to credit the French journalists, police inspectors watch the butchers' stalls, taste the wines (you may be sure of that!) and sight the eggs. A special brigade has a roving commission to decide by the smell upon articles vended—though when it comes to that, one would think that the merchandise might answer for itself to the customer. The same brigade has supervision of the kitchens of the eating houses, that the kitchen utensils may be kept in order. "Otherwise," said the Police Inspector, "verdigris, would claim a yearly tribute of victims." From all this it will appear that even French cooking is sometimes questionable, and that, well governed as a city as Paris undoubtedly is, it is not free from that graceless race of scamps who adulterate food for the sake of gain.

BEECHER AND THE CONDUCTOR.—The following good story is told of Rev. Henry Ward Beecher:—

It seems Beecher had observed the injustice of obliging men to work on Sundays, and preached a sermon on it. Next day, he entered into a conversation with a car-driver, while riding to Fulton Ferry, and asked him if he did not think that some plan might be adopted to dispense with the need of running the cars all day Sunday. The driver being entirely ignorant of the name and nature of his interrogative friend made a frank reply:—

"Yes, sir, I think there might. But there's no hope of it so long as they keep that d—d Beecher theatre open in Brooklyn. The cars have to run to accommodate that."

It is hardly necessary to add that the driver's remark was a "home thrust" and was considered so good that Beecher told it himself.

A TOMB.—There is now building by a New York family one of the most remarkable monuments in America. It is located in the Sleepy Hollow cemetery, at Tarrytown, but a few rods distant from the humble stone that marks the last resting place of Washington Irving, and is especially designed to commemorate a leading New York city official, who died about a year ago. It will be a great marble temple, costing about one hundred thousand dollars, and will be so high that it can be seen from the decks of the North river steamboats, though the cemetery is some distance from the shore. On its completion next fall, the family of the deceased will invite their friends to a formal inauguration of the mortuary monument. The sculpture that will adorn it is now being carved in Italy.

BLACKBERRY WINE.—To every gallon of the fruit allow a quart of boiling water; mash the berries; pour the boiling water on them, and stir them up well, cover and let it stand until the following day. Then having stirred all again, strain the liquid into the cask, adding good brown sugar in the proportion of two pounds to each gallon; cork it tight. The wine will be ready for use in the course of autumn. Still another way is to fill a keg or cask three-fourths full with sound blackberries; then fill up the cask with molasses, close it tight, and set it in a dry, cool place until winter. The liquid may then be poured off, and will be found an agreeable common wine, and the berries will make good pie.

THE WEED.
FAMILY FAVORITE.

We would call the attention of our friends in Alexandria and vicinity to the fact that we have opened at 922 Pa. ave. bet 9th and 10th streets, Washington, an establishment for the exclusive sale of the above popular and justly celebrated SEWING MACHINES.

THE WEED is pronounced by every one
The most simple,
The most durable,
The most economical,
The most rapid,
The most beautifully constructed and lightest running machine in use.

THE WEED uses a perfectly straight needle; makes the elastic lock stitch exactly alike on both sides; requires no screw driver, wrench, or tool of any kind in setting the needle; has no springs about shuttle, tension, thread-controller or feed; uses upper and under thread the same size, and will sew with equal ease and facility upon everything from country muslin to the coarsest material—greatly upon leather and boots of more than a quarter of an inch in thickness.

THE WEED was awarded the Highest Prize and Diploma at the Paris Exposition, in 1867, over eighty-two competitors; also the highest Prize and Diploma at the American Institute, New York, October, 1869, over all competitors; and, later, at the Maryland Institute Fair, Baltimore, November, 1869, after a contest of over four weeks with some of the most celebrated machines in the country, the Weed was again crowned with the highest honors and awarded the Gold Medal.

The Weed is sold at the lowest cash price on the most accommodating terms. Persons in search of the best machine should not fail to examine the Weed before purchasing any other.
